Dear Kevin:

Thank you for your captivating presentation at our recent Quality forum here at Lockheed Martin. The entire audience was focused on your every word. Your ability to pull them into the cockpit with you on your flight was unique and most beneficial.

As you know in the Quality world, there is little room for error. We are constantly striving for Six Sigma and better. The tools and techniques you gave the members of the audience that they can use immediately in that quest for high Quality are of great value to Lockheed Martin as a company. Our investment in you clearly has paid dividends.

Your presentation was not only informative and beneficial, it was also entertaining. I would encourage any organization that is considering you as a guest speaker to give me a call.

The need and ability to handle pressure appropriately is a dilemma we all constantly face. Your strategy and formula for taking that pressure and turning it into "Pressure Cooker Confidence", calm confidence is a lesson we all need.

Again, thank you for your contribution to the success of our Speakers Program. Our folks frequently talk about your presentation and the tools you gave them.

Sincerely,
